There must have been something very sweet in the nature of the intercourse which bound such a man as Cicero to such another as Tiro. Atticus applies to him, desiring him to use his influence respecting a certain question of importance as to Buthrotum. 1 Ad Att., lib. xiv., 13. 2 Ad Div., lib. xvi., 23. Buthrotum was a town in Epirus opposite to the island of Corcyra, in which Atticus had an important interest. The lands about the place were to be divided, and to be distributed to Roman soldiers--much, as we may suppose, to the injury of Atticus. He has earnestly begged the interference of Cicero for the protection of the Buthrotians, and Cicero tells...
