The Regional Railways Story: Sectorisation to Privatisation - Three Decades of Revival

By Gordon Pettitt, Nicholas Comfort

Oxford Publishing Co. Hardback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, The Regional Railways Story: Sectorisation to Privatisation - Three Decades of Revival, Gordon Pettitt, Nicholas Comfort, Following on from Ian Allan's authoritative books on InterCity and Network SouthEast, Gordon Pettitt, former Managing Director of Regional Railways and the last General Manager of BR's Southern Region, writes the inside story of the history of the third passenger sector of British Rail with insights from other leading personnel in the industry at the time. In the final years of British Rail, the railways moved from a regional structure to sectorisation. Regional Railways was established in 1982 and operated until 1997. It was faced with arguably the hardest challenge of the three sectors - operating roughly half the national network and traffic but generating only about a quarter of the revenue. Its portfolio was made up of the less popular routes to urban centres (those unsuitable for InterCity) but it was also responsible for all the low-density rural lines that had escaped the closures of the previous decades. The motive power and rolling stock it operated was generally older than that of the other two sectors and consequently less efficient, less popular with passengers,...
