Already her hair had lost the brightness of its youth, and she seemed to me smaller and more fragile; and the face that I loved when I was a hobbledehoy, and loved when I looked once more upon it in Thrum, and always shall love till I die, was soft and worn. Margaret was an old woman, and she was only forty-three; and I am the man who made her old. As Gavin put his eager boyish face out at the carriage window, many saw that he was holding her hand, but none could be glad at the sight as the dominie was glad, looking on at a happiness in which he dared not mingle. Margaret was crying because she was so proud of her boy. Women do that. Poor sons to be proud of, good mothers, but I would not have you dry those tears. When the little minister looked out at the carriage window, many of the people drew back humbly, but a little boy in a red frock with black spots pressed forward and offered him a sticky party, which Gavin accepted, though not without a tremor, for children were more terrible to him than bearded men. The boy s mother, trying not to look elated, bore him away, but her face said that he was made for life. With this little incident Gavin s career in Thrum began. I remembered it suddenly the other day when wading across the wynd where it took place. Many scenes in the little minister s life come back to me in this way. The first time I ever thought of...
