Every business, however small, whether in city, town or hamlet, finds growing need for this form of announcement, and merchants everywhere realize that the professional show-card writer is as important a part of modern business methods and equipment, as the clerk who hands the goods over the counter. The opening and development of this profitable avenue of employment for young men and women who can, with speed, produce neat and legible card signs, has inspired the authors to put into book form the results of their many years of experience as craftsmen and teachers. This work embraces a series of instructions written and illustrated in a plain...
