In many laboratories far too little weight is attached to the discussion of the magnitude and effect of sources of error on a result. This has been forced upon the writer s attention as the result of personal interviews with hundreds of graduate students entering the Institute, who apply for excuse from laboratory work. It is the exceptional student who has any conception how to figure out the precision of a final computed result from the precision of his individual measurements, and this is true even though his laboratory note-book shows his work to have been carefully and creditably performed. It is the author s firm conviction that one of the most valuable and enduring benefits of physical laboratory training to a student of Science or Engineering is the acquisition of the proper view-point with which to approach an investigation, be it either...
